

CAMOUFLAGE

Camouflage is a clever trick that animals use to blend in with their surroundings. They change their colors or shapes to look like the places they live in, like forests, deserts, or even the ocean. This amazing adaptation helps them hide from other animals that might want to eat them.

Some animals, like chameleons or certain insects, can change colors to match the trees or flowers around them. This incredible ability to hide keeps them safe and helps them sneak up on their own prey without being seen. It's like nature's own special invisibility cloak!
